

Drew Richelle

Somewhere between heartbreak, growing up, and figuring it all out, Drew Richelle started turning real life into songs.

A pop artist with a gift for honest storytelling, Drew writes music that captures emotion in its rawest form. Late night thoughts, shifting friendships, and the quiet moments of choosing independence all find their way into her lyrics.

Originally from Chicago, Drew has been surrounded by music from the very beginning. She was humming before she could talk and was inspired early on by her dad, who played in bands. From singing along to The Wizard of Oz to drawing influence from artists like Taylor Swift, she developed a deep love for storytelling through music. By age 11, she was already playing piano, guitar, and ukulele and writing songs of her own.

She later trained in classical voice at Chicago High School for the Arts before moving to Tennessee to pursue music more seriously, earning a degree in Music Business from Middle Tennessee State University.

Drew's sound lives in modern pop and indie pop, inspired by artists like Olivia Rodrigo, Gracie Abrams, and Sabrina Carpenter, while staying rooted in her own voice. Her songwriting is emotional, detailed, and grounded in real experiences, creating music that resonates on a deeper level.

Her singles Long Beach, Envious, and Friendship Breakups introduced her as an artist unafraid to say what others often leave unsaid. Now, her newest single Party For One, marks a new chapter. The track reflects independence, self worth, and personal growth, delivered through a confident and infectious pop sound.

Nominated for Song of the Year and Vocalist of the Year at the Josie Music Awards in 2025, Drew continues to build momentum as both a songwriter and artist to watch.

Alongside her music, Drew has also released her first poetry book, expanding her storytelling beyond music and into written form. The book reflects the same emotional honesty found in her songs, offering a nother layer into her perspective as a writer and artist.

At the core of everything she creates is a simple intention. To turn real experiences into music that feels honest, emotional, and lasting.

DrewRichelle.com