CURRENT SINGLE RELEASE

“I’m Coming Back”

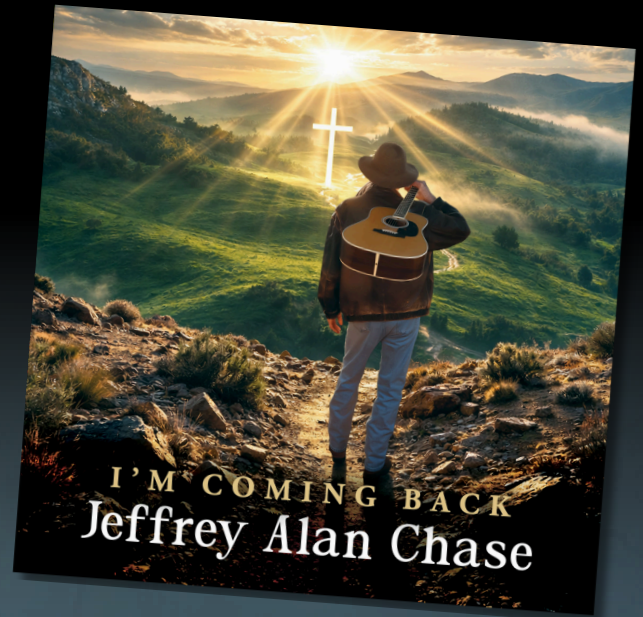

I went to church regularly as a kid. Faith was just part of life growing up. But once I was out on my own, things changed. I didn't have time for church because I had two jobs: one to pay rent, and the other to spend what was left making bad choices.

For a while I thought I was enjoying life, doing things my own way and calling the shots. But like the line in the song says, “All I felt was emptiness inside.” No matter what I was doing, there was always something missing.

It took years for me to understand that even though I had walked away from Jesus, He never walked away from me. He was always there, waiting patiently for me to come back. Ready to comfort me and ready to guide me. The truth is, I was just too stubborn for a long time to give up control of my life and let Him lead.

Coming back to faith changed everything. His love erased the loneliness I had carried for so long, and His grace gave me a new purpose. Now I get the chance to use music and my work in His name to reach other people who might be walking the same road I once did.

It feels good to be back.

ABOUT JEFFREY ALAN CHASE

Jeffrey Alan Chase has spent more than 40 years creating music, but his debut album arrives at a moment when the timing finally feels divine. I'm Coming Back, a 12-song collection co-produced by Jeff and Paul Scholton. It was recorded at County Q Studio in Nashville and captures the heart of a man who has lived a full life and now steps boldly into the calling God placed in him decades ago.

Raised in a home filled with singing, Jeffrey fell in love with music early singing harmony in church at 6, writing songs at 12, and playing original songs with bands he founded through high school and college. His influences range from Roy Orbison and the Everly Brothers to the Beatles, Beach Boys, The Eagles, For King & Country, and the jazz and blues legends that shaped his musical instincts. His style blends soulful melodies, honest storytelling, and a spiritual undercurrent that speaks directly to those searching for answers about faith.

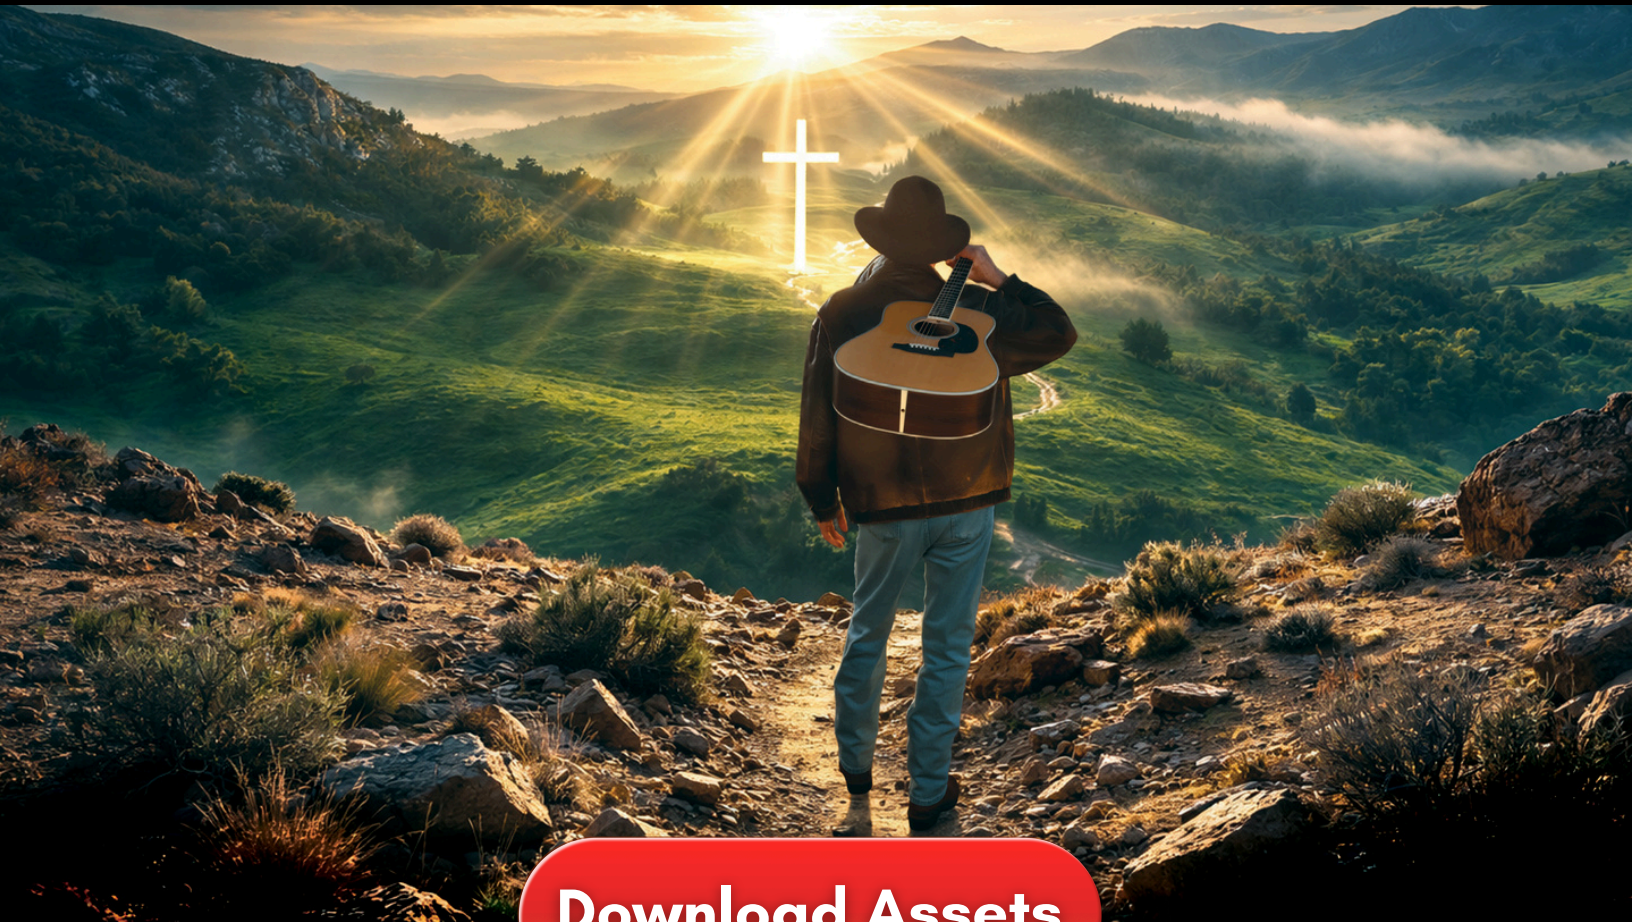

Jeffrey's journey has never followed a straight line. He's been a soda jerk, a Western Union delivery boy, a carpenter, a boxing referee, a commercial voice actor, a radio salesman, a real estate broker, and the founder of a successful IT company. He moved to Nashville in 1985 to pursue songwriting and spent years honing his craft while building a life rooted in service, humility, and faith.

Today, his focus is clear: share what Jesus has done in his life through music that is uplifting, joyful, and soul-stirring. "It used to be about me," he says. "Now it's about the message."

Supported faithfully by his wife Donna, Jeffrey brings decades of wisdom, heart, and lived experience to every lyric. I'm Coming Back is a testament to God's timing and a reminder that it's never too late to follow the dream He placed in you.
