

ABOUT THE BAND

Based in Wichita, Kansas, STEEL SKARECROW is a country band that lives and breathes country music. Their unique blend of classic and modern country, infused with red dirt, rock n' roll, and western swing, has been dubbed "dance hall revival." The band consists of Kurt Shobe, Kristopher Howell, Rollin Schmidt, and Mark Clemmons, who have been playing together for years, building a tight-knit musical brotherhood. Their shows are all about bringing the party, and they aim to make every audience member leave feeling better than when they walked in the door. With a reputation for delivering reliable, high-energy performances, STEEL SKARECROW has opened for many A-list stars, and their versatile repertoire can support any well-known act.

STEEL SKARECROW'S lead singer and guitarist, Kurt Shobe, believes in leading by example with honesty and integrity as his guiding principles. He strives to be a positive influence and an inspiration to others, ensuring that his actions align with his values. As the band's founder and leader, Kurt understands the importance of maintaining a strong reputation and values the trust and respect of his fans and fellow musicians.

LATEST SINGLE - LIQUID COURAGE

"Liquid Courage" is a spirited, upbeat anthem dedicated to those who have sought a boost of confidence through a little liquid courage and discovered an unexpected end result. The song captures the essence of life and love, taking listeners on a journey from a modest dose of bravery to the realization that too much liquid courage can have its consequences. Yet, amidst it all, the track emphasizes the joy and adventure found in the process of discovery. "Liquid Courage" invites everyone to embrace the ups and downs, reveling in the thrill of the ride while uncovering the limits of liquid courage.
